

Ali's Dream

Ali's Dream charity was set up by Alison Phelan's family and friends in order to raise funds for research into discovering the causes, advancing treatments and finding a cure for childhood brain tumours.

Sadly this was spurred on by the loss of Alison at the beginning of June 2001, three weeks before her eighth birthday.

Ali was diagnosed with a brain tumour in August 2000. Her family did not give up hope however and explored many avenues to find their miracle cure. During this time they discovered that in fact there is very little research being undertaken in this particular cancer area. The chances of finding a cure in the next twenty years are very remote.

What's more, after accidents, there are indications that due to a lack of funds for research, Brain Tumours have now overtaken Leukaemia as the biggest cancer killer of children under fifteen.

Having lost Ali, the family are not only united in grief, but also united in the determination to do something so that a cure can be found sooner rather than later.

Research

There are numerous forms of brain tumours and each type of tumour behaves in a different way. The types of tumour children develop are different and they behave differently to those seen in adults and some are much more difficult (or even impossible) to cure.

Research is in its infancy, with very little known about the behaviour of brain tumours, and this needs to be understood before significant progress can be made into treatments and finding a cure.

Ali's Dream first funded research project, "Identification of aberrantly expressed genes in different grades of malignancy in paediatric astrocytoma", was started in October 2003 and cost £90K over 3 years. Since then the charity has funded a further nine research projects and has raised over £700,000 to support this work.
